This year's tour features four lovely homes plus the Chapel, each in their unique settings. They are:

Stephen & Julee Becker:

Come and share our "tree house" with us. Built in 2011, talented architect, Justino Aguilar used the views of Ransom Canyon and neighbors Marlo and Martha Summit's beautiful pond to create a one of a kind place in West Texas. Built up high among a hundred trees and over natural springs, this open concept home serves up views from every angle. Huge panoramic windows let nature in. Natural textures of slate, granite and wood create a warm and cozy feeling. Inside and out, visitors will enjoy an eclectic mix of legacy and whimsical Christmas decorations, beautiful Christmas music and good company.

Couilla Cunningham

Step back in time and enjoy this homeowner's attention to details. You will see collections of Nativity scenes throughout the house, as well as family heirlooms, primitive antiques and many other collections. The back porch offers views of the lake and canyon ablaze with lights. This charming cottage on the lake will not disappoint you with Christmas Spirit at its best!

Dave & Sheryl Engelking:

The Engelkings extend a warm Texas welcome to their Hill Country-style home. The Austin Stone fireplace with mesquite mantle, rustic hunting trophies and wooded views gives this spacious home a gracious outdoors flavor. Christmas is woven throughout each room with rich dark reds, gold accents and an exotic safari theme.

Andy & Heidi Wilson:

Seventeen years ago, the Wilson's took one look at the creek in the backyard of a sweet little Brookhollow cottage and they were sold. Their home was originally 2 bedroom and 2 bath but after a major remodel 7 years ago, it would be difficult for the original owners to recognize. A spacious kitchen and living area adorned with cedar beams are the focal point of their home. The Wilson's just completed a remodel of their master bathroom and closet. You will find a beautiful collection of their children's art throughout the house as well as nativity scenes in every room.

Ransom Canyon Memorial Chapel:

The Chapel is always a must see on the Tour! The inspiring 12 foot high walnut cross was crafted by Ransom Canyon resident, Berwyn Tisdell. The ceiling to floor cross-view window is surrounded by natural stones like those in the lovely Chapel courtyard. We welcome you to come for hot apple cider, homemade cookies and Christmas music. A shuttle will be provided for transportation from the Chapel's parking lot to the Chapel.
